Do you ever feel like you are working harder than your students?

If so, then you need to learn how to help your students do the work of learning for themselves. Engagement is an important factor in achievement. When students and teachers are actively engaged, a genuine learning community is formed.

Participants will:
- Be actively engaged with hands-on activities that can be used the following day
- Learn specific strategies for helping students take ownership over their learning
- Learn how to increase student engagement and co-operation
- Learn how high-yield engagement strategies can bring excitement to the classroom.

Audience: Grades K-12 General and Special Education Teachers
